A Comprehensive Exploration

In an era marked by globalization and interconnectedness, the relationship between the local and the international has become increasingly complex and multifaceted. The book Rethinking Modernity Between The Local And The International delves into this complex interplay, offering fresh perspectives and challenging conventional notions of modernity.

Edited by a distinguished group of scholars, the book brings together a diverse range of voices from various disciplines, including sociology, anthropology, history, and cultural studies. Through a series of thought-provoking essays, the contributors explore the ways in which the local and the international are inextricably linked and mutually constitutive.

Key Themes and Perspectives

1. Globalization and the Local: The book examines how globalization impacts local communities and identities, considering both its homogenizing and heterogenizing effects.
2. The Interplay of Local and International: The contributors analyze the dynamic interplay between local and international forces, highlighting how they shape each other and influence social and cultural change.
3. Modernity and the Global-Local Nexus: The book challenges traditional understandings of modernity as a Western-centric phenomenon, arguing for a more nuanced understanding that incorporates the global-local nexus.
4. Identity and Belonging: The essays explore the impact of globalization and internationalization on individual and collective identities, examining how people negotiate their sense of belonging in an increasingly interconnected world.
5. The Future of the Local in a Globalized World: The book concludes with a discussion of the future of the local in a globalized world, considering the challenges and opportunities presented by this evolving relationship.
