The Constitution of the United States

The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land. It was adopted in 1789 and has been amended 27 times since then. The Constitution establishes the framework for the federal government and defines the rights and responsibilities of citizens.

The Constitution is divided into three parts: the Preamble, the Articles, and the Amendments. The Preamble states the purpose of the Constitution and the principles on which it is based. The Articles establish the structure and powers of the federal government. The Amendments are changes that have been made to the Constitution over time.

The Declaration of Independence

The Declaration of Independence was adopted in 1776 and declared the thirteen American colonies' independence from Great Britain. The Declaration states that all men are created equal and have the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. It also lists the grievances that the colonists had against the British government.

The Declaration of Independence is one of the most important documents in American history. It is a powerful statement of the ideals on which the United States was founded.

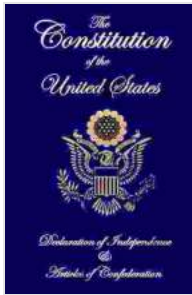

The Articles of Confederation

The Articles of Confederation was the first constitution of the United States. It was adopted in 1781 and established a loose confederation of states. The Articles of Confederation were replaced by the Constitution of the United States in 1789.

The Articles of Confederation were a weak document that did not give the federal government enough power to effectively govern the country. The Constitution of the United States was created to address the weaknesses of the Articles of Confederation.
