In this book, Jonathan Zittrain argues that the future of the internet is not set in stone. We have a choice. We can either allow the internet to continue to evolve in its current direction, or we can take steps to shape its future.

Zittrain offers a number of concrete proposals for how we can make the internet a more positive force in our lives. These proposals include:

- Investing in education and research to develop new technologies that can help us to solve the challenges posed by the internet.
- Creating new laws and regulations to protect our privacy and security online.

- Empowering citizens to take control of their own data and to hold governments and corporations accountable for their use of personal information.

Zittrain's book is a timely and important contribution to the debate about the future of the internet. It is a must-read for anyone who is concerned about the future of the internet and wants to take steps to shape its future.
