In his gripping memoir, 'With The Marines In Vietnam And The Rli And Selous Scouts In Rhodesia', author John Harris recounts his firsthand experiences as a soldier in both wars, offering an unforgettable account of courage, sacrifice, and the horrors of war.

A Marine's Perspective on the Vietnam War

Enlisting in the United States Marine Corps at the height of the Vietnam War, Harris was assigned to the 1st Battalion, 9th Marines, one of the most decorated units in the conflict.

Through vivid prose, he transports readers to the treacherous jungles of Vietnam, where he witnessed the brutal realities of combat. From fierce firefights to harrowing ambushes, Harris's account captures the intensity and camaraderie of the Marines on the front lines.

Joining the RLI and Selous Scouts in Rhodesia

After completing his tour in Vietnam, Harris traveled to Rhodesia, where he joined the Rhodesian Light Infantry (RLI), an elite counter-insurgency unit. In Rhodesia, he faced a different kind of warfare, as he fought against Marxist guerrillas in the Rhodesian Bush War.

As a member of the RLI and later the Selous Scouts, a covert unit specializing in reconnaissance and sabotage, Harris gained a deep understanding of the complex and often brutal nature of the conflict. His experiences in Rhodesia tested his limits both physically and mentally.
